DINNER MEETING 15 March 2010

Gaining recognition as an outstanding educator

DINNER MEETING 15 March 2010

Estelle Lewis
BSc (Syd) MEd (Macq)

Estelle Lewis has taught Science for many years in NSW schools in the state and independent sectors. She has been an educational consultant at The NSW Association of Independent Schools for eight years.

Estelle has presented workshops, courses and consultancies in a range of areas including curriculum, leadership and teacher accreditation. She has also managed a range of AGQTP projects most recently those in the area of teacher accreditation.

Estelle was appointed Director of Teacher Accreditation in 2007 and is responsible for developing and implementing the accreditation processes for the Independent Teacher Accreditation Authority (ISTAA). She works closely with the NSW Institute of Teachers and represents the independent sector on the NSW Quality Teaching Council. Estelle has represented the independent sector on a number of national committees and was involved in developing the draft National Professional Teaching Standards.

Are you an educator in a public, systemic or private school and do you...

- possess in-depth subject knowledge and pedagogy?
- keep abreast of and contribute to professional learning, dialogue and learning of others?
- engage in educational and professional discussions and debates?
- recognise your role in contributing to the learning of others including mentoring beginning teachers?
- communicate effectively to diverse audiences?
- interact professionally with the community?

Then come and listen to Estelle outline how to can gain PROFESSIONAL ACCOMPLISHMENT recognition as an educator.

Or as an educator do you...

- have a record of outstanding teaching and are you committed to enhancing the quality of teaching and learning?
- possess knowledge about the latest developments in pedagogy and can you apply those developments to unique student contexts?
- have outstanding interpersonal and leadership skills which are underpinned by principles of fairness, compassion and integrity?
- recognise the talents of others and promote and encourage those people to achieve their potential?
- apply critical analysis and problem-solving skills to educational matters?
- engage in professional learning and facilitate and support the professional learning needs of others, particularly induction programs for beginning teachers?
- communicate effectively with the community to support the development of your school and promote student learning?

Then come and listen to Estelle outline how to gain PROFESSIONAL LEADERSHIP recognition as an educator.

Lots of opportunity to ask questions.
